FOR RELIABLE ENERGY

California Unions for Reliable Energy (“CURE”) submits these comments on the 2015 Revised Draft Regulations, California Code of Regulations, Title 20 (“Revised Draft Regulations”). The Revised Draft Regulations include some improvements to the Commission’s initial proposed revisions to its regulations. However, there are some issues raised in our previous comments that still must be addressed. In addition, the Revised Draft Regulations contain new proposed revisions that raise new concerns.

As an initial matter, the general theme running through much of the Revised Draft Regulations is a movement away from some of the Commission’s obligations as a certified regulatory program under the California Environmental Quality Act.¹ Certification of a regulatory program is a determination that the agency’s program includes procedures for environmental review and public comment that are functionally equivalent to CEQA.² If a certified regulatory program no longer meets the criteria for certification, the Secretary of the Natural Resources Agency must withdraw certification from the noncompliant program.³

While CEQA excuses state regulatory programs meeting certain environmental standards from complying with some CEQA sections,⁴ a certified regulatory program still must comply with the bulk of CEQA’s procedural and substantive mandates,⁵ including carrying out a process that encourages public participation. For example, a certified regulatory agency must solicit meaningful public input on its environmental review document.⁶ But, as discussed below, several of the revisions in the Revised Draft Regulations appear to do just the opposite – they curtail meaningful public participation in the Commission’s environmental review process.

§ 1211.7 Intervenors.

The Revised Draft Regulations contain a new § 1211.7, which among other things, allows the Commission to limit intervenor participation in Commission proceedings. Specifically, § 1211.7(c) permits the Commission to “impose reasonable conditions on an intervenor’s participation, including but not limited to ordering intervenors with substantially similar interests to consolidate their participation or limiting an intervenor's participation to specific topics." § 1211.7(c) also eliminates language in § 1207 of the Commission's existing regulations which provides that intervenors "shall have all the rights and duties of a party under these regulations."

³ Pub. Resources Code § 21080.5(e).

As written, § 1211.7 allows the Commission to preemptively cut off a party's rights without justification. § 1211.7 runs the risk of disfavored parties being excluded from the Commission's siting process. Rather than allow the Commission to preemptively cut off a party's full engagement, § 1211.7 should be revised to allow the Commission to take action to limit an intervenor's participation if and when an offensive activity (i.e. an action that is outside of proper activity) occurs.

§ 1212 Rights of Parties, Record and Basis for Decision.

The Revised Draft Regulations amend § 1212 to eliminate from the hearing record public comments filed with the Commission which are not accepted by the Commission at a hearing. § 1212(a)(1) defines the "hearing record" as "all of the information upon which the commission may consider in reaching a decision" and "shall contain all documents, materials, oral statements, testimony and public comments accepted by the committee or commission at a hearing..." § 1212(c) provides that the basis for and contents of a Commission decision "may" include public comments if the comments are given at a hearing and "there is an opportunity for questioning of the commenter" (among other requirements).

§ 1212 effectively eliminates the ability of a member of the public who is not a party to submit written comments into the "hearing record" on which the Commission bases its decision. Moreover, the combined effect of Revised Draft Regulations §§ 1211.7 and 1212 on public participation is far too limiting. While § 1211.7 of the Proposed Draft Regulations allows the Commission to preemptively reduce parties' participation in Commission proceedings without justification, § 1212 essentially says that the Commission will not consider public comments as a basis for its decisions. Consequently, there is little room left for meaningful public participation.

§ 1212 is flatly inconsistent with CEQA and the Bagley-Keene Act. First, § 1212 is inconsistent with CEQA because public participation is an essential part of the CEQA process. The California Supreme Court has repeatedly emphasized the importance of the public's role in the CEQA process. The Court stated that members of the public hold a "privileged position" in the CEQA process which reflects "a belief that citizens can make important contributions to environmental protection and...notions of democratic decision-making..."⁷ Thus, "[e]ach public agency should include provisions in its CEQA procedures for wide public involvement, formal and informal, consistent with its existing activities and procedures, in order to receive and evaluate public reactions to environmental issues related to the agency's activities.”⁸ § 1212 would allow the Commission to exclude a member of the public from submitting written comments into the hearing record. This section cannot be reconciled with CEQA.

Second, § 1212 is inconsistent with CEQA because to seek judicial review of agency actions for alleged violations of CEQA, aggrieved parties must first exhaust their administrative remedies by either orally or in writing presenting their specific objections to the agency prior to the close of the record.⁹ In a CEQA action, the Court is limited to determining whether an agency's “act or decision is supported by substantial evidence in light of the whole record.”¹⁰ This “substantial evidence standard” applies to judicial review of an agency's conclusions, findings and determinations, the scope of the environmental analysis, the amount or type of information contained in the environmental analysis, the methodology used to assess impacts and the reliability or accuracy of the data supporting the agency's conclusions.¹¹ The Court gives substantial deference to an agency's determinations and a challenger bears the burden of proving the contrary.¹² Judicial review is limited to the evidence in the record of the agency proceedings.¹³ Thus, a challenger's oral and written objections to an agency's action or decision must be included in the record.

Finally, § 1212 is inconsistent with the purpose of the Bagley-Keene Act,¹⁴ which protects the rights of citizens to participate in State government deliberations. The Act implements Article I, §3(b) of the California Constitution, which declares that “the meetings of public bodies and the writings of public officials and agencies shall be open to public scrutiny.” Because § 1212 severely curtails public participation, it is inconsistent with the Act.

¹⁴ Govt. Code §§ 11120 et seq.

§ 1212 is inconsistent with CEQA and the Bagley-Keene Act. § 1212 should be revised to provide that the “hearing record” will automatically include all public comments filed prior to the close of the “hearing record.” Further, § 1212 should be revised to provide that the Commission’s decisions must be based on the whole record, including public comments submitted prior to the close of the record, as required by CEQA.¹⁵ Failure to make this change would result in the Commission’s process no longer being a CEQA functional equivalent process.

We understand that the Commission is trying to clarify what is and what is not proper material on which to base its decision. However, the method proposed in the current draft of the regulations would have the consequence, which we presume is unintended, of making the Commission’s siting process conflict with CEQA.

§ 1234 Jurisdictional Determinations.

We previously commented that the proposed new § 1234, which provides a process to seek a Commission determination as to whether a proposed activity falls under the Commission’s jurisdiction, leaves no room for public participation. Rather, § 1234 contemplates participation only by the Commission and the person seeking the jurisdictional determination. Unfortunately, the Revised Draft Regulations continue to exclude the public from jurisdictional determinations.

We reiterate that public participation in jurisdictional determinations has been, and should continue to be, an important part of Commission policy and practice. In fact, it was through public participation that the criteria in what is now § 2003 of the Commission’s regulations were established, including the determination of generating capacity of an electric generating facility, the maximum gross rating of the plant’s turbine generator(s) and the minimum auxiliary load.

§ 1234 should be revised to (1) provide for public notice of jurisdictional determination requests filed with the Commission and (2) to allow any interested person – not just “the person seeking the jurisdictional determination” -- to appeal the Executive Director’s jurisdictional determination.

§ 1742 Staff Assessment.

- § 1742(b)

§ 1742(b) of the Revised Draft Regulations states that “Staff’s preliminary environmental assessment shall be subject to at least a 30 day public comment period or such other time as required by the presiding member.” The language in §

¹⁵ Pub. Resources Code § 21168; Code of Civil Proc. § 1094.5.

1742(b) should be revised to make clear that the presiding member cannot reduce the comment period to less than 30 days. We recommend that the sentence read:

Staff's preliminary environmental assessment shall be subject to at least a 30 day public comment period or such ~~other~~ additional time as required by the presiding member or simply:

- § 1742(d)

§ 1742(d) states that if a project does not comply with all applicable federal, state, regional and local laws, ordinances, regulations and standards, “the staff assessment shall provide a description of all staff communications with the agencies responsible for enforcing the laws, ordinances, regulations and standards, for which there is noncompliance, in an attempt to remove the noncompliance.” It is not clear what is meant by the phrase “in an attempt to remove the noncompliance.” The meaning of this phrase should be clarified. In addition, all staff communication with agencies responsible for enforcing LORS – not just communication in the case of noncompliance -- should be included in the record. Consider, for example, an instance when an agency responsible for enforcing LORS mistakenly concludes that a project complies with LORS. All parties and the public should have the opportunity to scrutinize that determination. Thus, § 1742(d) should be revised to require that a description of all staff communications with agencies responsible for enforcing LORS be included in the record.

- Purpose and Rationale/Necessity

According to the Revised Draft Regulations, the “purpose and rationale” for § 1742 is to establish a clear process that “parallels the DEIR-FEIR process.” The “necessity” for the changes is to provide “clarity as to the comment and response process and what documents other jurisdictions can use for their CEQA process.”

As we explained in our previous comments, under the Commission’s CEQA certified regulatory program, a Preliminary/Final Staff Assessment is not equivalent to a Draft/Final EIR. A Staff Assessment is a report that presents the results of staff’s environmental assessments of a proposed project, which is offered as evidence at hearings.¹⁶ A Staff Assessment is not approved, adopted or certified by the Commission. Rather, the Commission certifies a project when it adopts a

¹⁶ 20 Cal. Code Regs. § 1748

Final Decision that contains the requisite CEQA findings.¹⁷ The Commission's Final Decision is the only document that a responsible agency may rely on when it approves a project.¹⁸ A mere staff report, no matter how capable the staff, is not a certification by the agency that the document complies with CEQA. Only the Commission itself in a voting meeting can make that certification. Thus, a Final Decision approved by the Commission is the CEQA-equivalent to a Final EIR. The Revised Draft Regulations should be modified accordingly.

§ 1745.5 Presiding Member's Proposed Decision; Comment Period; Basis, Contents, Hearing.

Draft § 1745.5(d) states:

Any governmental agency may adopt all or any part of a proposed commission decision, or final decision, as all or any part of an environmental analysis that CEQA requires that agency to conduct. It is the responsibility of the other agency to ensure that any such document meets the CEQA obligations of that agency.

According to the Revised Draft Regulations, § 1745.5(d) clarifies that the PMPD or final decision can be used by other agencies for "their CEQA needs."

We explained in our previous comments that under CEQA, a responsible agency cannot approve a project until it has considered the project's environmental effects as described in a certified final environmental impact report.¹⁹ Under the Commission's CEQA certified regulatory program, a PMPD is not equivalent to a final EIR certified by a lead agency. Rather, a PMPD is one Commissioner's opinion which may be revised and which is not approved, adopted or certified by the Commission. The Commission certifies the environmental analysis when it adopts a Final Decision that contains the requisite CEQA findings.²⁰ Thus, it is the Commission's Final Decision and associated findings adopted by the full Commission to certify the environmental analysis that will satisfy the responsible agency's obligations under CEQA.

To comply with CEQA, § 1745.5(d) should be revised to state:

Any governmental agency may adopt all or any part of a ~~proposed~~ ~~commission decision, or~~ final decision, as all or any part of an environmental analysis that CEQA requires that agency to conduct. It is the responsibility of the other agency to ensure that any such document meets the CEQA obligations of that agency.

¹⁸ 14 Cal. Code Regs. § 15096(f).

²⁰ Id. § 1755.

It may be that the actual goal for this revised regulation is to inform other agencies who are not acting as responsible agencies but are instead acting as lead agencies for an approval that is related to the project under review that they may utilize the work of the Commission when doing their own, independent analysis. If so, the regulation should be redrafted to make this clear.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments on the Revised Draft Regulations.

Respectfully submitted,

During the 14-OII-01 proceeding, California Unions for Reliable Energy (“CURE”) submitted three sets of comments and participated in the workshop regarding the proposed revisions to the Commission’s Process and Procedure Regulations, California Code of Regulations, Title 20. The most recent Proposed Amendments to Title 20 Commission Process and Procedure Regulations (“Proposed Amendments”) included in this rulemaking improve some of the Commission’s initial proposed revisions to its regulations. However, there are some important issues raised in our previous comments that still must be addressed. In addition, the Proposed Amendments contain new proposed revisions that raise new concerns.

Before describing the specific proposed revisions that require attention before the Commission can adopt the Proposed Amendments, we must reiterate our concern that, generally, the Proposed Amendments undermine the Commission’s obligations as a certified regulatory program under the California Environmental Quality Act.¹ Certification of a regulatory program is a determination that the agency’s program includes procedures for environmental review and public comment that are functionally equivalent to CEQA.² If a certified regulatory program no longer meets the criteria for certification, the Secretary of the Natural Resources Agency must withdraw certification from the noncompliant program.³

While CEQA excuses certified regulatory programs from complying with certain CEQA sections,⁴ it does not excuse a certified regulatory program from complying with most of CEQA’s procedural and substantive mandates,⁵ including carrying out a process that encourages public participation. For example, a certified regulatory agency must solicit meaningful public input on its environmental review document.⁶ But, as discussed below, several of the Proposed Amendments stifle meaningful public participation in the Commission’s environmental review process. Accordingly, if adopted as proposed, the Commission’s site certification process would no longer qualify as a functional equivalent to CEQA, thus requiring the Commission to conduct a separate CEQA process.

⁴ Agencies with qualifying programs are excused from CEQA sections 21000 through 21154 and 21167. Sections 21100 through 21108 which relate to the EIR process for State agencies. Sections 21000 through 21154 relate to the EIR process for local agencies. Section 21167 provides statutes of limitations for challenging agency decisions on various CEQA grounds.

Section 1211.7 Intervenors.

Section 1211.7 allows the Commission to limit intervenor participation in Commission proceedings. Specifically, section 1211.7(c) permits the Commission to “impose reasonable conditions on an intervenor’s participation, including, but not limited to, ordering intervenors with substantially similar interests to consolidate their participation or limiting an intervenor’s participation to specific topics.” Section 1211.7(e) contains a new revision (not included in the previous drafts of proposed revisions) which allows any party to appeal any ruling on a petition to intervene. In other words, a presiding member’s grant or denial of intervention could be appealed. This is significant departure from longstanding Commission policy and procedure where only a petitioner who has been denied intervention can appeal the denial. The proposed revision will open the door for any party (i.e. a project applicant who, obviously, wants the fewest number of obstacles in the permitting process) to vigorously oppose intervention. The proposed revision would undoubtedly result in unnecessary use of the Commission’s unlimited time and resources to deal with numerous appeals of decisions to grant intervention.

Section 1211.7 allows the Commission to preemptively cut off a party’s rights without justification and allows any party to try to block intervention in a proceeding. Section 1211.7 runs the risk of disfavored parties being excluded from the Commission’s siting process and creates an unnecessarily laborious intervention process. Section 1211.7 should be revised to allow the Commission to take action to limit an intervenor’s participation if and when an offensive activity (i.e. an action that is outside of proper activity) occurs. Section 1211.7 should also be revised to include the language in the existing section 1207 of the Commission’s regulations, which provides that only a petitioner who has been denied intervention may appeal the denial.

Section 1212 Rights of Parties, Record and Basis for Decision.

Proposed Amendments in sections 1212(b)(1)(A) and (B) and 1212 (c)(2) only allow public comments to be included in the hearing record and relied on in a Commission decision if the comments are: (1) accepted by the Commission at a hearing; (2) the Commission provides notice of its intent to rely on the comments “at the time the comment is presented;” (3) parties have “an opportunity to question the commenter;” and (4) parties have an “opportunity to provide rebuttal evidence.”

As we previously explained, the Proposed Amendments to section 1212 effectively eliminates the ability of a member of the public who is not a party to submit written comments into the “hearing record” on which the Commission bases its decision. Further, the combined effect of Proposed Amendments to sections 1211.7 and 1212 on public participation is far too limiting. While section 1211.7 allows any party to oppose a member of the public’s intervention in a proceeding and allows the Commission to preemptively reduce parties' participation in proceedings without justification, § 1212 essentially says that the Commission will not consider public comments as a basis for its decisions. As a result, there is little room left for meaningful public participation.

§ 1212 is flatly inconsistent with CEQA and the Bagley-Keene Act. First, § 1212 is inconsistent with CEQA because public participation is an essential part of the CEQA process. The California Supreme Court has repeatedly emphasized the importance of the public's role in the CEQA process. The Court stated that members of the public hold a "privileged position" in the CEQA process which reflects "a belief that citizens can make important contributions to environmental protection and...notions of democratic decision-making..."⁷ Thus, "[e]ach public agency should include provisions in its CEQA procedures for wide public involvement, formal and informal, consistent with its existing activities and procedures, in order to receive and evaluate public reactions to environmental issues related to the agency's activities."⁸ § 1212 would allow the Commission to exclude a member of the public from submitting written comments into the hearing record. This section cannot be reconciled with CEQA.

§ 1212 is also inconsistent with CEQA because to seek judicial review of agency actions for alleged violations of CEQA, aggrieved parties must first exhaust their administrative remedies by either orally or in writing presenting their specific objections to the agency prior to the close of the record.⁹ In a CEQA action, the Court is limited to determining whether an agency's "act or decision is supported by substantial evidence in light of the whole record."¹⁰ This "substantial evidence standard" applies to judicial review of an agency's conclusions, findings and determinations, the scope of the environmental analysis, the amount or type of information contained in the environmental analysis, the methodology used to assess impacts and the reliability or accuracy of the data supporting the agency's conclusions.¹¹ The Court gives substantial deference to an agency's determinations and a challenger bears the burden of proving the contrary.¹² Judicial review is limited to the evidence in the record of the agency proceedings.¹³ Thus, a challenger's oral and written objections to an agency's action or decision must be included in the record.

Finally, § 1212 is inconsistent with the purpose of the Bagley-Keene Act,¹⁴ which protects the rights of citizens to participate in State government deliberations. The Act implements Article I, §3(b) of the California Constitution, which declares that "the meetings of public bodies and the writings of public officials and agencies shall be open to public scrutiny." Because § 1212 severely curtails public participation, it is inconsistent with the Act.

The Commission cannot adopt Proposed Amendments § 1212 as written. § 1212 must be revised to provide that the "hearing record" will automatically include all public comments filed prior to the close of the "hearing record." Further, § 1212 should be revised to provide that the Commission's decisions must be based on the whole record, including public comments submitted prior to the close of the record, as required by CEQA.¹⁵ Failure to make this change would result in the Commission's process no longer being a CEQA functional equivalent process.

§ 1234 Jurisdictional Determinations.

We previously commented that the proposed new § 1234, which provides a process to seek a Commission determination as to whether a proposed activity falls under the Commission's jurisdiction, leaves no room for public participation. Rather, § 1234 contemplates participation only by the Commission and the person seeking the jurisdictional determination. Unfortunately, the Proposed Amendments continue to exclude the public from jurisdictional determinations.

We reiterate that public participation in jurisdictional determinations has been, and should continue to be, an important part of Commission policy and practice. In fact, it was through public participation that the criteria in what is now § 2003 of the Commission's regulations were established, including the determination of generating capacity of an electric generating facility, the maximum gross rating of the plant's turbine generator(s) and the minimum auxiliary load.¹⁶

§ 1234 should be revised to (1) provide for public notice of jurisdictional determination requests filed with the Commission and (2) to allow any interested person – not just “the person seeking the jurisdictional determination” -- to provide comment on and appeal the Executive Director’s jurisdictional determination.

§ 1742 Staff Assessment.

§ 1742(d) states that if a project does not comply with all applicable federal, state, regional and local laws, ordinances, regulations and standards, “the staff assessment shall provide a description of all staff efforts with the agencies responsible for enforcing the laws, ordinances, regulations and standards, for which there is noncompliance, in an attempt to correct or eliminate the noncompliance.” As we previously commented, all staff communication with agencies responsible for enforcing LORS – not just communication in the case of noncompliance -- should be included in the record. Consider, for example, an instance when an agency responsible for enforcing LORS mistakenly concludes that a project complies with LORS. All parties and the public should have the opportunity to scrutinize that determination. Thus, § 1742(d) should be revised to require that a description of all staff communications (or “efforts” as it is now phrased in the Proposed Amendments) with agencies responsible for enforcing LORS be included in the record.

§ 1745.5 Presiding Member’s Proposed Decision; Comment Period; Basis, Contents, Hearing.

Proposed Amendments § 1745.5(d) states:

Any governmental agency may adopt all or any part of a proposed decision, or final decision, as all or any part of an environmental analysis that CEQA requires that agency to conduct. It is the responsibility of the other agency to ensure that any such document meets the CEQA obligations of that agency.

We explained in our previous comments that under CEQA, a responsible agency cannot approve a project until it has considered the project’s environmental effects as described in a certified final environmental impact report.¹⁷ Under the Commission’s CEQA certified regulatory program, a proposed decision is not equivalent to a final EIR certified by a lead agency. Rather, a proposed decision is one Commissioner’s opinion which may be revised and which is not approved, adopted or certified by the Commission. The Commission certifies the environmental analysis when it adopts a Final Decision that contains the requisite CEQA findings.¹⁸ Thus, it is the Commission’s Final Decision and associated findings adopted by the full Commission to certify the environmental analysis that will satisfy the responsible agency's obligations under CEQA.

To comply with CEQA, § 1745.5(d) must be revised to state:

Any governmental agency may adopt all or any part of a ~~proposed decision, or final decision,~~ as all or any part of an environmental analysis that CEQA requires that agency to conduct. It is the responsibility of the other agency to ensure that any such document meets the CEQA obligations of that agency.

As we previously stated, it may be that the actual goal for this revised regulation is to inform other agencies who are not acting as responsible agencies but are instead acting as lead agencies for an approval that is related to the project under review that they may utilize the work of the Commission when doing their own, independent analysis. If so, the regulation should be redrafted to make this clear.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments on the Proposed Amendments.

Respectfully submitted,

California Unions for Reliable Energy (“CURE”) submits these comments on the Express Terms 15-Day Language for the Proposed Amendments to Title 20 Commission Process and Procedure Regulations (“15-Day Language”). CURE submitted four sets of comments and participated in a workshop during the 14-OII-01 proceeding and this rulemaking. We thank Commission staff for addressing the majority of our concerns. We have remaining concerns about just two sections of the 15-Day Language.

Section 1212 Rights of Parties, Record and Basis for Decision.

The proposed sections 1212(b) and(c)(2) allow public comments to be included in the hearing record and relied on in a Commission decision only if: (1) the comments are offered or received into evidence at a hearing; (2) the Commission provides notice of its intent to rely on the comments “at the time the comment is presented;” (3) parties have “an opportunity to question the commenter;” and (4) parties have an “opportunity to provide rebuttal evidence.” It appears that the intent of this language is to prohibit public comments from “automatically being part of the record” and to “clarify that only public comment accepted at a hearing could potentially support a finding...Written comments simply filed with the commission could not be used to support a finding.”¹ We previously explained that the Commission cannot adopt sections 1212(b) and(c)(2) as written because they are inconsistent with both the policy and the letter of the California Environmental Quality Act.

Sections 1212(b) and (c)(2) undermine the Commission’s obligations as a certified regulatory program under CEQA.² Certification of a regulatory program is a determination that the agency’s program includes procedures for environmental review and public comment that are functionally equivalent to CEQA.³ If a certified regulatory program no longer meets the criteria for certification, the Secretary of the Natural Resources Agency must withdraw certification from the noncompliant program.⁴ While CEQA excuses certified regulatory programs from complying with certain CEQA sections,⁵ it does not excuse a certified regulatory program from complying with most of CEQA’s procedural and substantive mandates,⁶ including carrying out a process that encourages public participation. As described in our previous comments and below, sections 1212(b) and (c)(2) would do just the opposite

- stifle meaningful public participation in the Commission's environmental review process. If the Commission adopts sections 1212(b) and (c)(2) as written, the Commission's process would no longer be a CEQA functional equivalent process and the Commission would have to conduct a separate CEQA process.

The CEQA Guidelines state that, “[p]ublic participation is an essential part of the CEQA process.”⁷ The California Supreme Court has repeatedly declared that the public plays a crucial role in the CEQA process.⁸ Sections 1212(b) and (c)(2) cannot be reconciled with CEQA policy favoring public participation because the sections place an undue burden on the public to meaningfully participate in the Commission's environmental review process. Sections 1212(b) and (c)(2) would force members of the public to attend a hearing to get oral and written comments into the record. Further, for the Commission to rely on public comments to support a finding in its decision, sections 1212(b) and (c)(2) would force members of the public to be cross-examined by the applicant, staff or any other party who wishes to do so. This is unreasonably burdensome on the public, will thwart public participation and is inconsistent with the strong public participation policy of CEQA.

Take, for example, a situation where a member of the public who lives in the area of a proposed project (and is a biologist), saw a protected species on the project site on several occasions. The biologist submits written comments to the Commission describing his or her knowledge, experience and sightings. Under the proposed sections 1212(b) and (c)(2), the comments could not be a part of the record or relied on by the Commission in its decision unless the biologist entered his or comments into the record at a hearing and the applicant, staff and any other parties to the proceeding had “an opportunity to question the commenter.” Forcing a member of the public to travel (potentially hundreds of miles), and then be cross-examined by multiple attorneys, to get his or her comments into the record is completely unreasonable – it is a hurdle that most members of the public would not be willing to jump. The result would be a chilling effect on meaningful public participation in the Commission's environmental review process. Moreover, it would deprive the Commission of perhaps the best evidence of a potentially significant environmental impact.

Sections 1212(b) and (c)(2) are also inconsistent with CEQA because public comments would not automatically be a part of the hearing record. To seek judicial review of agency actions for alleged violations of CEQA, challengers must first exhaust their administrative remedies by presenting their specific objections to the agency prior to the close of the record.⁹ In a CEQA action, the Court is limited to determining whether an agency’s “act or decision is supported by substantial evidence in light of the whole record.”¹⁰ This “substantial evidence standard” applies to judicial review of an agency’s conclusions, findings and determinations, the scope of the environmental analysis, the amount or type of information contained in the environmental analysis, the methodology used to assess impacts and the reliability or accuracy of the data supporting the agency’s conclusions.¹¹ Sections 1212(b) and (c)(2) would force members of the public to attend a hearing to enter oral or written comments into the record. This is contrary to CEQA which requires the hearing record to include all public comments submitted to an agency orally or in writing prior to the close of the record.¹²

The Commission cannot adopt sections 1212(b) and (c)(2) as written. Section 1212(b) must be revised to provide that the “hearing record” will automatically include all oral or written public comments submitted prior to the close of the “hearing record.” Section 1212(c)(2) should be revised to provide that the Commission’s decisions must be based on the whole record, including public comments submitted prior to the close of the record, as required by CEQA.¹³ Failure to make these changes would result in the Commission’s process no longer being a CEQA functional equivalent process.

Section 1234 Jurisdictional Determinations.

We previously commented that the proposed new section 1234, which provides a process to seek a Commission determination as to whether a proposed activity falls under the Commission’s jurisdiction, improperly excludes public participation. Therefore, we recommended that section 1234 be revised to provide for public notice of jurisdictional determination requests filed with the Commission and to allow any interested person – not just “the person seeking the jurisdictional determination” - to appeal the Executive Director’s jurisdictional determination. While revising section 1234 is preferable, we note that section 1231 still provides an option for the public to participate.
